Patricio Varas, Chairman and CEO of Domestic Metals, stated: “The Company believes that with the current needs in the United States for critical minerals and in particular the shortage of domestic internal production of copper coupled with new tariffs on copper imports, it is an opportune time for Domestic to share with shareholders and other interested parties recent developments and plans for the Smart Creek Project.”

Mr. Varas further stated that: “The State of Montana is an excellent mining jurisdiction to explore for copper and the Smart Creek Project has key attractive exploration characteristics, including, a large copper and gold endowed footprint, alluring previous drilling data, including an intercept of 109 meters of 0.75% copper, which support the Project’s potential to host a major bulk mineable orebody that warrants commensurate exploration investment. We look forward to share further details during our webinar on August 28th.”
